SALES RACKET DESCRIBED AT MCKAY TRIAL

MAN WHO KNEW THE "RIGHT MEN" GETS OVER $12,000

BY ROBERTA APPLIGATE
Jackson, Mich., Jan. 22 (AP)—A stormy session in the Mc Kay liquor conspiracy trial was climaxed today by testimony that Charles Letier, who has pleaded guilty, received more than $12,000 in commissions on liquor sales because he "knew the right men."

Richard Haynes of Detroit, former representative of the Schenley Liquor Company, testified that he hired Letier "to introduce himself as A. Brown" after "he said he knew all the store managers and specially designated distributors" and that he also "knew a man in Grand Rapids."

"Did you say 'a man in Grand Rapids'?" Special Prosecutor Kim Sigler asked.

"Possibly he said the man in Grand Rapids," Haynes replied.

Mistrial Demanded

Defendants in the case are Frank D. Mc Kay, of Grand Rapids, reputed former "boss" of the state Republican party; William H. McKeighan, five times mayor of Flint; Fisher L. Layton, Flint politician; and Charles H. Williams and Earl J. Williams, former partners in a liquor sales agency.

They are accused of conspiracy to corrupt the State Liquor Control Commission between 1938 and 1940.

Letier, originally named as a defendant, pleaded guilty last September 1, just before the trial first was scheduled to start in Jackson county circuit court.

As the court session closed, Eugene L. Carey, of New York, chief counsel for Mc Kay, angrily asked for a mistrial, charging that Sigler had made prejudicial remarks. Judge John Simpson said he would rule on the motion Wednesday morning.

Haynes had just testified he had employed a man named Sam Westerman to succeed Letier, and Carey asked that Westerman be identified.

"He was a conspirator," Sigler replied.

"I object to his calling people anything he chooses — Mr. Sigler will call anyone a conspirator — there is no one by that name listed in the information," Carey retorted.

"The prosecutor broke in: 'When I find a conspirator, brother, I'll name him.'"

It was at this point, the New York attorney asked for the mistrial.

Paid In Cash

Haynes testified he paid Letier one and a half per cent on sale of domestic brands of liquor and two and a half per cent on imported brands.

Payments were made in cash, he said, "in different places — restaurants, taxis, the lobby of my office building, or maybe a telephone booth."

Haynes told Sigler "he always was in a hurry for money."

He testified he ended his relationship with Letier early in 1937 and that in 1939 Letier again came to see him, seeking employment.

"He told me all his friends were back again," the witness said. "I knew he was a Republican and that this was a Republican administration. You don't hire Democrats in that case."

Four state witnesses preceded Haynes to the witness stand this afternoon, three of them merely to identify exhibits.

Godfrey Mammel of Detroit, a business counselor, testified he had paid McKeighan "twelve or thirteen hundred dollars" from a check for $1,700 he had received

Blind and Crippled, Chase S. Osborn, 86, Enjoys Good Health

Poulan, Ga., Jan. 22 (AP)—Chase S. Osborn, Michigan's elder statesman, marked his 86th birthday anniversary at his winter home near here today with a report that he is in excellent general health although blind and crippled as the result of a right hip fracture a year ago.

Osborn, who was Michigan's governor from 1911 to 1913, and his adopted daughter, Stellanora Osborn, produced two books during the past year. One of them was "Hawatha With Its Original Indian Legends" which presents, inspirationally, the full Michigan background for the Hawatha epic.

The other was a work entitled "Errors In Official U. S. Area Figures." This was a record of the campaign Osborn and his daughter have waged to have the census bureau include portions of Lakes Erie, Huron, Michigan and Superior within the boundaries of the state.

The former governor said the real significance of the true area figure would mean $9,000,000 in increased highway money for Michigan in the next three years.

He said one of his ambitions is to see the bridging of the Straits of Mackinac.

RANKS GIVEN 11 WAR GENERALS

Clark, Target Of Rapido Crossing Criticism Included In List

Washington, Jan. 22 (AP)—Mark W. Clark, recently assailed by a veterans' group because of a costly battle in the Italian campaign, was nominated today for the permanent rank of major general by President Truman.

The names of ten other well known wartime leaders were sent to the senate for promotion to the same permanent rank.

The nominee include six who were full generals under temporary war-time ranking: Courtney Hicks Hodges, Jacob Louis Devers, George Churchill Kenney, Carl Spaatz, Thomas Troy Handy and Clark.

Four others were temporary lieutenant generals: Ira Clarence Eaker, Robert Lawrence Eichelberger, Walter Bedell Smith and Robert Carlwood Richardson Jr.

Clark was criticized in a resolution adopted Saturday at Brownwood, Texas, by members of the 36th Division association calling for congressional investigation of the Rapido River crossing in January, 1944. A War Department spokesman defended the engagement as diversionary to permit the Anzio beachhead assault.

Clark, who is in Europe, has declined comment.

Vandenberg To Run Again In November; Busy In London Now

London, Jan. 22 (AP)—Republican Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg, of Michigan, took time out from the United Nations Conference here today to declare his intention of seeking re-election next November.

His announcement followed close on the heels of reports that Major Arthur W. Wermuth, of Traverse City, Mich., famed "one-man army of Bataan," would seek the post on the Democratic ticket.

"I certainly am running for reelection," said Vandenberg, a conference delegate, "but I'm not saying anything about it."

The senator did not amplify his statement which was in response to a question about a report he might retire when his term expires Jan. 3, 1947.

Maj. Wermuth said at his home here last night that he is "going into politics as a Democrat" when his terminal Army leave expires Feb. 1, and until then, he said, he would not care to be quoted as to the position he would seek.

He admitted, however, he would be "interested" in the post now held by Senator Vandenberg.

Big Three Divides Up German Fleet

London, Jan. 22 (AP)—An American, Russian and British communiqué said tonight that "operable surface units" of the German fleet, together with 30 submarines, would be divided equally among the big three.

The communiqué said the decision on the breakup of the German navy was made at the Potsdam conference.

German ships which can not be made operable "within a specified time" will be destroyed.

MEDAL FOR HERSHEY—Maj. Gen. Lewis B. Hershey has the DSM pinned on him by President Truman for his "indispensable service" in the war effort. Irate War Mothers Corner Eisenhower

BY WILLIAM F. ARBOGAST
Washington, Jan. 22 (AP)—Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower walked into a verbal ambush of irate war mothers today, heard at length their complaints about demobilization, and promised them his autograph.

From half a dozen cities the mothers, about twenty of them representing organizations devoted to obtaining the release of soldiers, gathered in a hallway in the house office building. They had heard that the army chief of staff was due to explain demobilization to the house military committee.

Unwarned and unguarded, Eisenhower walked toward the committee room. Before he could dig in, he was backed into a corner of the office of Chairman May (D-Ky.) and faced a withering barrage of questions. They all dealt with the theme: "When do we get our husbands back?"

When he could get an answer in edgewise, Eisenhower, obviously embarrassed but in charge of the situation, told the women:

About 700,000 fathers are still in uniform and by July 1 all but 200,000 of them should be home. To turn them all loose now would be impossible.

The general told the mothers he sympathized with them and wished he could get all fathers home immediately. He also sympathized, he added, with non-married overseas veterans who think they should be given a chance to come home, get married and start families.

Mrs. Nancy Muller, of Pittsburgh, submitted a five-point program to provide replacements for army fathers. She proposed:

1. Continuation of the draft law;
2. Raising of the draft age to 38;
3. Reinduction of young men formerly deferred or declared surplus;
4. Allotments for young inductees to permit them to obtain their higher education while in service abroad, and
5. Lowering of army physical standards to permit more inductions of non-fathers.

Paris, Jan. 22 (AP)—Socialist Felix Guin, 60-year-old lawyer, emerged today as Gen. Charles De Gaulle's probable successor as interim president of France at the head of a Communist-Socialist-Republican coalition government.

His election by the constituent assembly tomorrow was regarded as almost certain. He had the support of the Communists, who proposed him as a candidate and of his own party.

The M.R.P., late tonight accepted the general terms of the coalition. Solution of the government crisis came after the Communists withdrew their candidate, Maurice Thorez, and proposed Guin as an individual who had been supported unanimously by all parties when put at the head of the assembly.

Opposition to the present draft of the proposed new constitution for France, which calls for an all-powerful unicameral legislative system, and a figurehead French president, was one of the causes of De Gaulle's resignation.

University Seeks Cure For Malaria

Ann Arbor, Mich., Jan. 22 (AP)—Search for a cure for recurrent types of malaria, with which numerous student veterans here are afflicted, has started at the University of Michigan School of Public Health, it was announced today.

Successful during the war in developing drugs used by the armed forces to fight malaria, the school's department of tropical diseases has instituted the new research program, Dean Henry F. Vaughan said.

The research is privately financed by the University John and Mary Markle Fund, while war time drug testing was carried on under contract with the federal office of scientific research and development.

The O. S. R. D. recently announced development of a synthetic drug, SN 7618, which relieves acute malaria attacks three times as fast as quinine or atabrine.

STEEL STRIKE SPREADS INTO ALLIED FIELDS

IDLE MILLS STILL MAKING MONEY, MURRAY SAYS

BY NORMAN WALKER
Pittsburgh, Jan. 22 (AP)—Philip Murray called on the government tonight to remedy present tax laws under which the CIO leader said the strike-bound steel industry could "loaf the rest of the year—remain absolutely idle" and still make $149,000,000 profit.

Murray handed newsmen at a press conference copies of a letter written to Secretary of the Treasury Vinson asking him "as guardian of the U. S. Treasury to take immediate steps to terminate this outrageous condition."

Each Blame Other

Before Murray spoke the impact of the great steel strike, going into its third day and involving 750,000 members of his CIO Steel-Workers Union in 29 states, had spread to Allied fields.

And in New York Benjamin F. Fairless, president of U. S. Steel, reiterated his contention that Murray's steel wage demands would place the industry "in jeopardy."

Fairless blamed the union, Murray, saying he had received no word from Washington about any plans of federal seizure of the idle steel mills, told reporters he wanted to reassure everyone the steel strike will continue until President Truman's proposed 18½-cent an hour increase for steel-workers is granted.

The CIO chief said he saw the present industry-labor situation as a fight to transfer control of the government from Washington to Wall Street. That control, he added, had rested in Wall Street prior to 1933.

The strike situation itself remained calm. Pickets continued their vigil at gates of some 1,300 steel, fabricating and aluminum plants and bauxite and iron ore mines over the nation.

The letter said the 10 per cent excess taxes refund provision entitles the steel industry to $200,000,000 in rebates. It said "carry-back tax provisions secretly slipped through congress" will give the industry $149,000,000 more if it fails to make any profit in 1946.

Layoffs Increase

Effects of the almost complete stoppage in steel and aluminum began to be felt in layoffs of railroad and river barge workmen and coal miners.

Benjamin F. Fairless, president of the U. S. Steel Corporation, said the steel industry had met the wage demands of the 750,000 CIO steelworkers "more than half way" and responsibility for their walkout "rests with the union."

Philip Murray, president of the CIO and its Steelworkers Union, had said in a broadcast here last night the strike was brought on by "an evil conspiracy among American big business" to destroy unions.

Murray contended the industry could afford to pay the 18½-cent increase proposed by President Truman, a figure the union had accepted after first scaling

Navy Again Reduces Discharge Points To Release 191,100

Washington, Jan. 22 (AP)—The United States has approved the sale to Spain of eight C-47 transport planes and nearly $300,000 in aircraft equipment discarded by the army, government officials disclosed today.

At the same time, it was learned that the state department has approved sale of five four-engine transport planes to a private aviation company in Argentina.

The planes and equipment for Spain were purchased from the state department's office of foreign liquidation in Paris by a mission representing the Franco government.

A state department spokesman disclosed approval of the sale of equipment which he said would be used to improve the Madrid airport. It includes bulldozers, scrapers, shovel units, dump trucks and a semi-trailer.

The state department spokesman told his news conference that "no approval has been given for the sale of surplus military supplies" to the Franco government. He explained that the department did not classify the transport planes as military supplies.

No Work, No Food; Rule For Germans

Gen. Short Accuses Army Of Making Him Pearl Harbor Goat

BY WILLIAM T. PEACOCK
Washington, Jan. 22 (AP)—Maj. Gen. Walter C. Short today accused the war department of withholding vital information from him and then trying to make him the "scapegoat" for the Pearl Harbor disaster.

In a blistering statement read before the joint congressional committee investigating the Dec. 7, 1941 attack, the former Hawaiian Army commander said:

1. He would have foreseen the attack and taken steps to meet it had the war department only transmitted to him its "abundance of information."
2. The top Army command sought to "pass the buck" to him for "their failure to anticipate the surprise raid."
3. He believed the high command fully realized from his report of action taken after a Nov. 27, 1941, war warning that his command was alerted only against sabotage.

With this testimony, Short thus joined Rear Adm. Husband E. Kimmel, the 1941 Pacific fleet commander, in laying on Washington's doorstep the prime responsibility for the surprise element of the assault.

Contending Washington had the information "essential to a correct estimate of the situation" but did not give it to him, Short asserted:

"Had this information been furnished to me I am sure that I would have arrived at the conclusion that Hawaii would be attacked and would have gone on an all-out alert."

The 65-year-old retired officer is convalescing from an attack of pneumonia and testified in a husky voice. At the outset, he read a 13,000-word statement summarizing his position.

In brief, his main contentions were:

The Hawaiian army never got equipment and facilities adequate to protect the fleet despite his repeated requests to Washington.

He had prepared his command for war as adequately as he could with the material available and the circumstances prevailing.

He had prepared the civilian population by arranging for production and storage of food, organizing doctors and nurses for emergency work, organizing an auxiliary police force, and preparing shelters for women and children.

He had every reason to believe he would be warned by the navy if a Japanese force approached the islands. Short said the navy had accepted responsibility for distant reconnaissance.

BLASTS WRECK CITY IN ITALY

Death Toll Reaches 23; 3,000 Homeless Are Housed In Tents

Rome, Jan. 22 (AP)—An Ansa dispatch said tonight the death toll in the ammunition blasts yesterday at Torre Annunziata had reached 23.

Allied authorities in Naples said there were some Allied casualties among an estimated 500 injured, but no Allied dead.

A Naples dispatch to Rome's Giornale Della said the explosion of 15 ammunition cars had razed the town's shore line over an area of more than a half-mile long and a quarter of a mile in depth, with property loss estimated at 1,000,000,000 lire ($100,000,000).

The Giornale dispatch said the 15 cars containing mortar bombs, air bombs and artillery shells caught fire and exploded, while another six cars were removed between blasts by firemen and railroad workers.

Three thousand of the town's 40,000 inhabitants were made homeless by the explosions and were sheltered in 300 tents provided by UNRRA.

Marines May Leave China By Summer

Shanghai, Jan. 22 (AP)—Repatriation of Japanese from North China "is proceeding at such a rate that I hope within four or five months we will be able to withdraw the Marines altogether," Rep. George J. Bates (R-Mass.) said today in an interview.

Bates, a member of the House naval affairs committee, arrived with eight other congressmen inspecting naval facilities and studying surplus property and demobilization problems. They flew here from North China where they talked with Marines and listened to complaints about food, accommodations, and demobilization.

Bates said the committee realizes the situation in China is delicate and the American forces are serving as a calming influence.

Fair Practice Bill Called GOP Trick To Get Negro Vote

Washington, Jan. 22 (AP)—Senator Tydings (D-Md.) told the Senate today that the bill for a permanent fair employment practices commission was "simply political shenanigans" and most Republicans were supporting it "to get the Negro vote."

He spoke after supporters of the FEPC had defeated, on a 33 to 24 rollcall vote, his move to adjourn at 5 p. m. They kept it in session until 6 p. m., making the filibusterers who have been talking since Thursday work one hour overtime.

PACKERS WITH AFL WILL GO BACK TO JOBS

WHITE HOUSE HOPES TO END SCARCITY ALREADY FELT

Chicago, Jan. 22 (AP)—Fact-finding hearings in the nationwide meat packing industry strike opened here today, shortly before government sources in Washington announced that packing plants would be seized by the government—probably tomorrow.

Assistant Secretary of Labor John W. Gibson announced the seizure and White House officials indicated that the order would be sent out tomorrow.

Move Called "Unjust"

Shortly after the hearings opened, the United Packinghouse Workers of America (CIO) strategy committee, following a White House statement that the seizure had been under consideration, said any such action was "totally unjust."

Officials of the CIO meat packers, headed by President Lewis Clark, spent the day in conference with labor department officials. Tonight, Gibson told newsmen the union leaders had "made no commitments" when asked whether their members would go back to work if the government seized the meat plants.

Asked if this would delay the government's move, Gibson replied that it would not; the seizure would take place regardless. At one point he said it was his "understanding" the seizure would be carried out, but in response to other questions he made the flat statement.

Edgar L. Warren, chief of the Federal Conciliation Service, told reporters he had been assured by T. J. Lloyd, an official of the AFL Meat Cutlers and Butchers Union, that AFL workers would return to work if the government took over.

Prices Come First

George A. Eastwood, president of Armour and Company, said he had not been officially informed of the seizure, but he could not "see how such action in itself can settle the wage demands which precipitated the strike."

"The issue," he said, "is not whether wages shall be raised but is really a matter of where money to meet the increased expense can be obtained. That issue is definitely up to the government because it controls our income through ceilings on meat and floors and ceilings on live stock. When the price relief question is satisfactorily decided the wage increase question can be decided at the same time."

An agriculture department official said indications that the job of running the seized packing plants would be handed that division.

In such an event, he said, a "good guess" for the man to get the assignment of executing the orders would be Harry E. Reed, director of livestock marketing. However, this source added, he had not heard of an official selection.

The official, who did not wish to be quoted by name, said Reed was the most experienced man in the department in the field and had handled government meat

TRUMAN'S BILL HAS NO TEETH

House Committee Prunes
Fact-Finding Measure
For Early Vote

Washington, Jan. 22 (AP)—The House Labor Committee pulled two teeth from the president's fact-finding bill today and shoved it to the floor for early consideration.

President Truman wanted action. But he also wanted the fact-finding boards empowered to examine company records and unions barred from striking during the process.

These two features were missing from the bill which the committee approved. Mr. Truman has said he thinks the measure will be useless without them.

There was general expectation among the congressmen, however, that efforts would be made to restore them in the form of amendments when the House takes it up. Some of the committee members, in fact, said they voted for the measure with this expectation in mind in order to get action.

The committee rejected the president's plan 13 to 5. It then approved 10 to 8, a version by Rep. Landis (R-Ind.) which establishes fact-finding boards but denies them subpoena authority and provides no "cooling-off" periods.

Those who favor stricter strike legislation announced plans immediately to try and write stronger language into the bill when it reaches the floor, probably next week.

down its original 25-cents per hour demand to 19½ cents. Fairless rejected Mr. Truman's suggested compromise.

Coal Catches Up
Factories depending on steel prepared for eventual shutdowns. In Pittsburgh, members of the Tri-State Industrial Association met to map plans in the face of fast-dwindling steel inventories, limited by the government to 60-day supply because of the strike.

A hangover from the wartime fuel shortage still exists, and, with the steel mills down, the coal industry had a chance to build up supplies. A spokesman for the Western Pennsylvania Coal Operators Association said captive mines—those operated by steel companies—will continue operations "as long as their coal can be sold on the open market."

In Washington President Truman sent a letter to his steel fact-finding commission asking it to stand by "for further consultation." The commission had delayed hearings on the dispute pending the president's own settlement efforts immediately preceding the strike, which began early Monday.

White House Press Secretary Charles G. Ross, in a reply to a question, said no answer had been received from Fairless in reply to Mr. Truman's suggestion that the industry reconsider its rejection of the 18½-cent an hour increase.

Widow Of Murphy To Enter Politics

Detroit, Jan. 22 (AP)—Mrs. Constance Murphy, 41, widow of former lieutenant Governor Frank Murphy, tonight announced she would seek the Democratic nomination for that office at the forthcoming state primary.

Mrs. Murphy—mother of six children ranging from 20 years to 17 months old—said she would carry out an active campaign, including a state-wide speaking tour. She is the first woman aspirant for the office, which Lieut. Gov. Vernon J. Brown will surrender to become Republican candidate for governor.

Mrs. Murphy said in her announcement, "During my husband's tenure—in 1941 and 1942—I spent my entire time in Lansing in close association with his work and am thoroughly familiar with it."

Murphy died on Christmas Day, 1944.

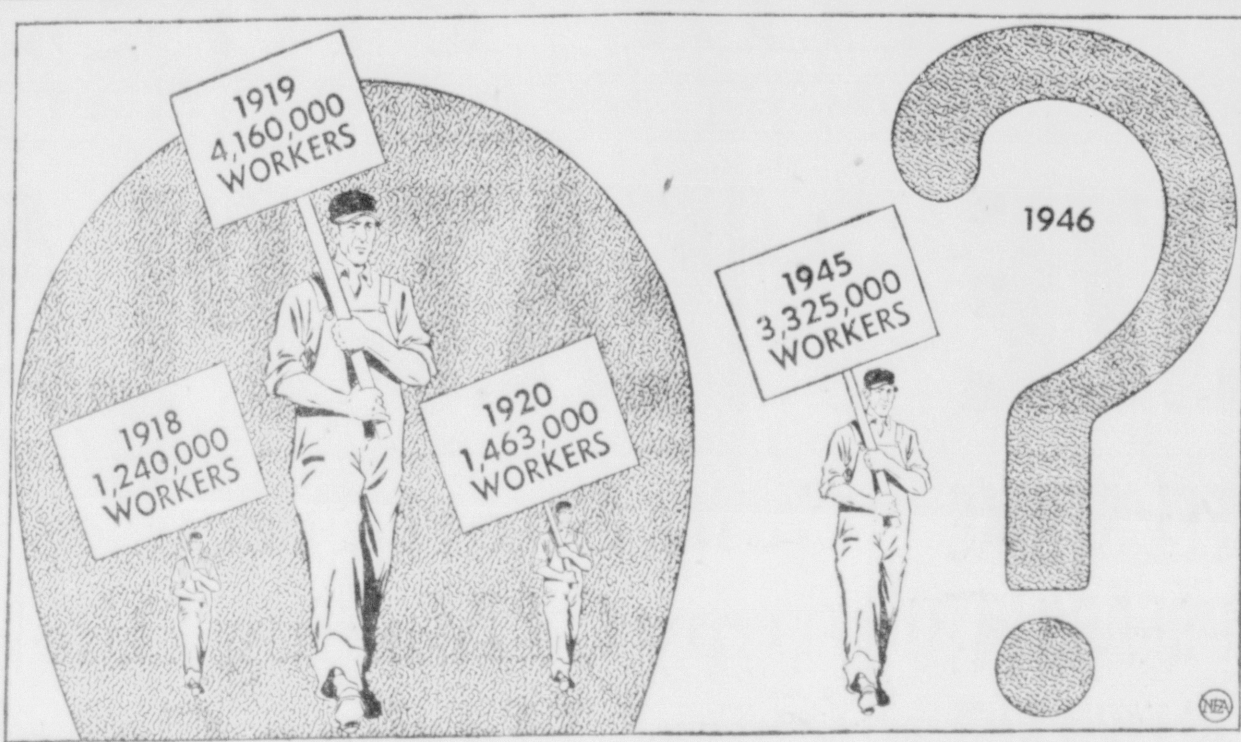

Indonesia Opposes British Withdrawal

BY VERN HAUGLAND
Batavia, Java, Jan. 22 (AP)—Premier Sutan Sjahrir of the unrecognized Indonesian republic and an official of the Netherlands East Indies government both said today that they opposed the withdrawal of British forces from Indonesia at this time.

The Ukrainian Soviet Socialist Republic yesterday asked the Security Council of the United Nations Organization to "put an end to the present situation" in Indonesia, and asserted that British troops as well as Japanese armed forces were taking part in military actions against the local population in Indonesia.

Sjahrir said that if the Russians did not mind the Indonesians would prefer that the British remain in the islands until the Japanese had been disarmed and removed.

All Quiet—Then It Happened To 106th

By NEA Service

The 106th Infantry (Golden Lion) Division arrived in Europe from the United States in mid-December, moved up to the front and, because it was a green unit without previous combat experience, was assigned to a relatively quiet sector in the Ardennes.

And then it happened. Von Rundstedt's mighty winter counter-offensive exploded, and the focal point of the attack—the heaviest weight of German arms—was directed precisely at that "quiet" sector where the Golden Lions were stationed.

In the foggy dawn of Dec. 16, the German attack jumped off with a tremendous artillery barrage. This was followed by enemy tanks and infantry and, along with them, German soldiers disguised as American MPs, to create confusion.

The 106th fought back desperately against the fury of the Nazi juggernaut for two hellish days. The 42nd and 423rd infantry regiments held out against overwhelming numbers, despite lack of food, water and ammunition. Finally, their radios were silent. The remaining Golden Lion regiment, the 424th, clung grimly to its position near St. Vith, preventing the Germans from taking that vital communications center.

When the 106th's casualties were added up, the division had lost 8,663 men, of whom some 7000 were prisoners. Later, the Golden Lion outfit returned to battle, its ranks composed almost entirely of replacements, and gave a good account of itself. When the war ended, the division was assigned to the control of 16 prisoner-of-war camps with almost a million inhabitants. Ardennes had been avenged.

Washability Is Most Important Quality Of Fabric

New York—"Will it wash?" is the first question most customers ask when looking for a piece of material, according to a survey made by the Textile Resin Department of the American Cyanamid Company. A survey of 120 leading department stores in 35 states showed that washability of all types of fabrics is rated as the most important single quality desired by customers.

Eighty per cent of the stores asked for wool fabrics that can be washed without fear of harmful shrinking or felting. They feel that knitwear, sweaters, children's clothes, blankets and sportswear should be shrinkproof.

Control of shrinking and stretching of rayon fabrics was also widely requested, with many stores pointing out the present tendency of rayon dresses to sag while hanging on the racks. Almost 60 per cent of the stores asked for a finish for acetate rayons that would keep blue and green fabrics from fading. Some dissatisfaction with present methods of creaseproofing was indicated by 54 per cent of the stores.

Improved fabrics which overcome these objections may be available within six months to a year, according to the Textile Res-

CIVILIANS GET NEW BICYCLES

3 Million Two-Wheelers
To Hit Market In This Year

New York, N. Y.—America will be taking to the highways this spring in great numbers, for the first time in four years. No, there's no mass migration in store. It's just that the bicycle manufacturers of America are once more turning out two-wheelers for the civilian market.

By year-end, says the industry, there will be about 3 million new bikes in the country. Right now there are about 12 million, many badly run-down. Normal peacetime sales, mostly to youngsters, average about a million bicycles a year, but pent-up demand is expected to spur production for several years.

Manufacturers face no material shortages. Ball bearings, diverted almost entirely to tanks and trucks and virtually all other war equipment, after Pearl Harbor, are again available for civilian use. Like the automobile industry, bicycle makers are heavily dependent on these anti-friction devices, which originally made possible the bicycle's widespread popularity.

At present, only four bike models are being made: the standard (adult) lightweight type and the balloon tire type, in men's and women's models. No small fry two-wheelers will be made this year, but there may be some slight output of tri-cycles.

Despite increased use of bicycles by war workers in recent years, the industry aims primarily at a young market. Two million children each year reach the age-9 years—when they "must" have a bike, manufacturers say, and there is an unfiled backlog of such orders dating back several years.

Not all details of the production picture are yet clear. Prices for 1946 still await OPA pricing formulas, and the chances are this year's models will lack much of the chrome and nickel trimmings of pre-war two-wheelers.

From Junior's point of view, these things don't matter too much. The important thing is that "the boy's and girl's automobile" is again for sale down at the sporting goods store—and that Dad and Mother probably don't have any more sales resistance today than they had before the war.

In Department. One such finish, a melamine resin to control wool shrinkage, has already been put on the market.

Hostages Released By Greek Rebels

By L. S. CHAKALES

Athens, Jan. 22 (AP)—Martial law in the mountainous Kalamata region of Greece, invoked when a band of rightwing insurgents held nearly 100 hostages for two days, will remain in effect for several weeks, an Army official announced tonight.

The hostages were released today after British Col. Max Noble negotiated with insurgent leaders in a mountain village to which the rightwingers, identified as members of a group of monarchists known as "Klitos," had fled. Six hostages were killed while trying to escape the insurgents, released hostages reported.

Release of the hostages was announced in time for government commanders to countermand an order to storm the rebel bastion.

Col. Noble said no concessions were made to affect the release of the prisoners and that those who took part in the uprising would be sought.

Raise Recommended By Federal Agency For Shipyard Crews

Washington, Jan. 22 (AP)—Government procurement agencies today recommended a 15 per cent wage increase for approximately 650,000 shipyard workers throughout the nation.

The proposal was made to the working committee of the shipbuilding wage stabilization conference in an effort to break a deadlock in wage discussions which has tied up the conference since last December 4.

Sponsoring the offer were the War and Navy Departments, the Maritime Commission and the Labor department.

Comdr. Wright of the Navy Department presented the 15 per cent offer, which would mean an increase of about 18 cents an hour for standard mechanics in shipyards who now receive $1.20.

Violent Nazi Girl Tells British She's Hitler's Daughter

Herford, Germany, Jan. 22 (AP)—An attractive 18 year old girl who insists she is the daughter of Adolf Hitler is being held by British military government authorities.

A British army psychiatrist who questioned her said her general intelligence appears to be about average, but that he believed her claim to be Hitler's daughter may be a "hysterical phenomenon with little or no truth or reality in it."

The girl, who gave her name as Godelind Tortensen, said her mother, now dead, was a Swedish actress and was Hitler's mistress in the late twenties.

Described as a violent Nazi who hates British and Americans, the girl is being held in an internment camp near Paderborn as a security suspect and also for thorough interrogation regarding her story of her relationship to Hitler. She was picked up in the Magdeburg area for boasting openly that she had shot an American officer for trying to seduce her.

Savings And Bonds Mostly Exhausted By Strikers At GM

Detroit, Jan. 22 (AP)—More than 40,000 of the 175,000 General Motors workers now on strike have exhausted their savings and war bonds, the Michigan Citizens' committee to aid GM strikers said today.

Chairman Ralph McPhee, publisher of the Washtenaw Post-Tribune, announced that a welfare sub-committee of four social workers had been formed to screen all requests for aid. A group of some 20 doctors, he added, have volunteered their services free to GM strikers and their families.

"Even though in Detroit and in most Michigan towns strikers are eligible for public welfare aid," McPhee declared, "there are many emergencies which have to be met."

Original 30 Per Cent
Demand Reinstated
By CIO Union

Detroit, Jan. 22 (AP)—The CIO United Automobile Workers' Union advised President Truman today it had withdrawn its acceptance of a compromise 17½ per cent wage increase in its dispute with General Motors Corp. and reinstated its original 30 per cent increase demand.

At the same time the union called on tool and die workers in the Detroit area to halt all work for General Motors next Monday.

The latter action was taken, a union spokesman said, because "we have waited in vain for GM to join us in acceptance of recommendations of the President's fact-finding board."

The union had set today as the deadline for General Motors to reconsider its rejection of the fact-finders' recommendations. A company spokesman said it was standing on its last offer of approximately 12 per cent increase.

The General Motors strike to date has cost the 175,000 hourly rated workers involved $71,190,000 according to union calculations based on a 40-hour week and $80,766,000 by management estimate based on a 45.6 hour week.

Higher Meat Prices
THE biggest worry confronting the nation today is the threat of inflation. President Truman conceded that in his message to Congress. The danger is real and it is tremendous. Living costs have already risen substantially within the past four years, despite all efforts to control prices.

Paradoxically, President Truman proposed higher wages and lower prices as the answer to the nation's economic ills and then offered as a solution to the meat packers' strike an increase in the price of meat to meet the workers' demand for more wages.

The proposed increase in meat prices is not large, only about a third of a cent per pound on the wholesale level, but it is one more leak in the dyke established to hold the price line. If the solution to the meat packers' strike is higher meat prices, it follows rather logically that this will likewise be the administration's answer to the wave of strikes in other industries.

To lessen the shock of increased meat prices, the government has proposed a dual standard—a 25¢ per hundredweight increase for civilian purchasers and 35¢ per hundredweight on government orders. The government purchases naturally are paid for by the people just as much as their own meat purchases at the neighborhood market.

It makes nice talk to prate about higher wages and lower prices but the truth of the matter is simply that we are not going to get both, at least not for a long time to come. If we yield to the demands of the striking unions, the answer inevitably will be higher prices, too, as the situation in the meat industry proves.

Improved Pullmans
WHEN the rush of service men back to their homes is over, civilians may expect to see many new gadgets in sleeping car accommodations. The interiors of hundreds of old cars will be torn out, and many of the cars junked or converted to day use.

Soldiers and sailors say that the so-called government sleepers, used to bring the boys home from the west coast, were fairly comfortable. Many of these cars have three rows of bunks along each side, greatly increasing passenger capacity. It is expected that they will offer sleeper accommodations to civilians at very low rates, probably lower than tourist sleeper prices are today.

There will be hundreds of new "room cars," in which one or two people will have space all to themselves, with washroom conveniences. Rates on these will be about the same as the present charges for lower berths, and no doubt the rooms will be extensively patronized.

The war has brought out scores of good ideas in Pullman, dining car and day coach construction. The railroads will do their level best to keep and further build up public patronage through these and other improved accommodations.

Our Way of Life
IN a period of seemingly senseless turbulence, Columnist Howard Vincent O'Brien finds it not too hard to keep relatively free of despair. That there is a general feeling of despair for the future of world peace, no one can deny.

O'Brien and other writers feel that we are certainly in for something which can be described as a "revolution" and that the latter is not too strong a word. Our way of life is being shaken to the core, but we are so close to what is going on that we cannot estimate the dangers of the times, the prospects, or even the implications of what is happening from day to day.

People who live in times of revolution seldom realize what a change they are in for, or even helping to bring about. This no doubt was true of the French Revolution, when 22,000 heads fell under the guillotines of Paris, Marseilles and other French cities. And it was proportionately true of the Russian Revolution, when 750,000 people were put to death as the result of centuries of misrule.

In our own day we cannot get the right perspective or import of events, until distance enough intervenes so that we can estimate them justly. We know that something great and portentous is happening, but what the outcome will be is on the knees of the gods.

The present generation, if it develops vision enough, can give a beneficial trend to the future. For example, church leaders everywhere could by united action accomplish wonders in making world peace secure and permanent. The same could be said of the world's political leaders and their potential getting-together around the table with a vision of unity in their hearts.

If these and other leaders of men cannot achieve vision and understanding, if they cannot engineer a new deal of the spirit for mankind, then it will be too bad for the world. Our way of life, so highly prized for its freedom and regard for others' rights, will pass into the discard of forgotten things.

Losing Public's Favor

THE American Federation of Musicians has expelled Dr. Joseph E. Maddy from union membership following a hearing before the executive board in Chicago.

Dr. Maddy has been paying his dues to the union for 37 years. He was ousted because he dared to disagree with James C. Petrillo, AFM president, when he used his dictatorial tactics to halt the broadcasting of concerts by student musical groups at Camp Interlochen. Dr. Maddy is the founder and director of Camp Interlochen, which has been the source of inspiration to promising music students from all over the country.

Petrillo rules over the affairs of the American Federation of Musicians with an iron hand. In recent years, he has been acting like a dictator drunk with power and has put unionism in general in a bad light. In the long run, unions must have public opinion on their side in order to improve the lot of the working men. They will lose public favor if their leaders lose their heads.

Unbalanced Budget

IN his message to Congress Monday, President Truman proposed government expenditures of nearly 36 billion dollars for the fiscal year beginning July 1, a figure approximately 4½ billion dollars above estimated revenues. By drawing on the treasury's cash balance to pay the difference, the government proposes to give the impression that the budget will be balanced in the 1946-47 fiscal year for the first time in 17 years.

While it is true that the figure juggling of the administration makes possible the first reduction in the national debt in 17 years, the budget will not be balanced, even though the estimated government revenue for the year is the largest peacetime income in the nation's history. Under the president's financial program, we will still be spending considerably over four billion dollars more than revenue for the year.

National expenditures will continue high for many years to come. Obligations to veterans and other war-borne costs make this inevitable but all federal expenditures that can be trimmed should be pared immediately. We no longer can afford the luxury of boondoggling bureaucracy.

FARM REVOLUTION

(Chicago Journal of Commerce)

Like the American farmers who accomplished near-miracles in food production during the war, farmers in England and Scotland did a super job after the U-boat blockade threatened to cut off imports. Sixty per cent of Britain's food was coming in by ship when the war began and something had to be done. The story of what was done is told in an official British handbook called "Land at War."

Since early Saxons gave a great deal of land had lain in grass or weeds or mere brush. It was put to use, to the extent of 6,000,000 acres, before the conflict ended, 2,000,000 acres having been plowed during the Fall and Winter of the so-called "phony war."

Within two years the wheat crop was doubled, as were barley and potatoes, and cows increased by 300,000. More oats, cabbage, brussels sprouts and fruit were grown. Only sheep, pigs and poultry—all regarded as wasteful converters of foodstuffs—declined.

Britain's farmers lost 98,000 skilled hands to the armed services. The government sent 117,000 volunteer women to the country and, while their numbers filled the gap, their assistance didn't cover the added 6,000,000 acres in cultivation. County committees marshaled modern machinery wherever they could obtain it and most of it was used all day and, by moonlight, all night. Blacksmith shops that had not been used in years were reopened and converted into tractor-repair units. Man and machine moved relentlessly.

Thus Britain witnessed a farm revolution, but for which the national diet would have suffered more than it did in nearly six years of war. And, though she still does not produce all the food she needs—and probably never will—Britain again is a rich agricultural country, thanks to the qualities that make farmers a good deal alike the world over.

THE SPLIT INFINITIVE

Answer: Such uncompromising purists as my pedantic assistant, Dr. Etain Shridli, D.D.T. However, the split infinitive is an honorable and useful con-

World Events Analyzed

BY MARQUIS CHILDS

Washington—Three times President Truman has spoken hastily and extemporaneously on questions of far-reaching international importance, and each time the echoes of misunderstanding have bounced back and forth from one side of the world to the other.

The first occasion, which was also the most serious, was at Reelfoot Lake in Tennessee, when he announced that the United States would keep the "Secret" of the atomic bomb. The second was his announcement that all international matters, including the peace settlements, would be left to the United Nations.

The third remark was made at his last press conference, when he said that we would keep the bases in the Pacific that we needed for our own purposes. That, at any rate, was what he said in response to the first question concerning U. S. policy on trusteeships for bases and mandated territories.

—ISLAND TRUSTEESHIPS—
It might have stood like that if a veteran correspondent, Raymond P. Brandt of the St. Louis Post-Dispatch, had not brought the discussion back to trusteeships. Then the President added that we would ask the United Nations to approve our individual trusteeship over certain islands that we considered necessary for our own defense system.

The following day, there was a clamor from Congress and from London for a clarification of what the President had actually meant. This is understandable. The President, under press-conference rules, cannot be quoted directly, so what he says is always paraphrased.

Then a story was whipped up suggesting that a group of senators were determined that the United Nations should not have the right to say whether the United States was to be allowed to exercise solitary trusteeships over bases that we might consider strategic. To put it another way, they would deny UNO even the face-saving device of approving our "Request."

This, according to the news story, was the same group of senators who went out to the United Nations conference in San Francisco to make sure such American bases were not internationalized. A subcommittee of the Senate National Affairs Committee, it includes Senators Tobey and Capehart, Republicans, and Senators Byrd and Eastland, Democrats.

The fact is, however, that not all of the group hold to this view. Senator Tobey, a forthright New Hampshireman with the courage of his convictions, says:

"While I went to San Francisco with the other senators and felt it highly desirable and important that we should retain the islands we had taken with our forces, yet because of my deep yearning for world peace and my hope that the successful operation of UNO may implement that objective, I would be willing to make almost any reasonable sacrifice to that end. Therefore, I would not oppose any treaty because of island control."

—TAKES NATIONALIST VIEW—
Of the other three senators, Capehart takes an extreme nationalist position on most issues. So does Eastland. Byrd, an ultra-conservative in matters foreign and domestic, would not allow any interference of any kind with our sole possession of the Jap-mandated islands that our forces conquered.

Ironically enough, it is from men who think like this that the most angry criticism of Russia comes when Russia takes an identical stand and says that strategic areas—in the Balkans or in the middle east—are necessary for her defense. Whether they represent the thinking of the majority of the senate is doubtful.

Some confusion might have been avoided if President Truman had issued a prepared statement. This would have left no doubt as to his meaning. It was known beforehand that the question would come up.

The institution of the press conference has been compared to the question hour in the House of Commons, when members of the government are quizzed. But the British Prime Minister and his cabinet do not give offhand answers to parliament. Replies are carefully thought out in advance, especially when they touch upon world issues.

struction which is often necessary and desirable to prevent awkwardness of ambiguity.

For my readers at large, let me explain the term "split infinitive." Simple verbs preceded by "to" are spoken of as infinitive, as; to go; to sing; to run; to place. When an adverb is inserted between "to" and the verb, the infinitive is "split," thus: to/ quickly/ go; to/ sweetly/ sing; to/ swiftly/ run; to/ some day/ place.

The split infinitive is common in modern literature, and is found in the writings of such noted authors as Herbert Spencer, Burns, Browning, and Byron. Byron used it so freely that he has been called "Father of the Split Infinitive" ("To/ slowly/ trace the forest's shady sheen").

In some sentences the split is unavoidable. For example: "This book is designed to/ better/ equip women for secretarial work." Otherwise, we should be forced to write: "... designed better to equip women," or, "... designed to equip better women."

In my sentence, the split was desirable. If it had read, "... hopes someday to place," the adverb "someday" would have modified "hopes," which is not the thought intended. The Royalist Party does not "hope someday," it hopes today, now, at the present moment. If it had read, "... hopes to place someday Don Juan," it would have been still more grotesque. Thus, "... hopes to/ someday/ place" makes the sentence both clear and logical.

Paved With Good Intentions

Good Morning!

—By The Bugler—

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN—Two hundred and forty years ago (Jan. 17, 1706) Benjamin Franklin was born in Boston, the son of a poor tallow chandler and the fifteenth of seventeen children.

His life was remarkably successful and complete, and today he is recognized and honored as one of America's greatest men.

Although he has been, for millions of readers, a man who abhorred excesses and was an exponent of common sense in all things, Franklin was too much alive not to enjoy life. That he was not the straight-laced Puritan has been revealed in a more careful perusal of his writings and his life.

Biographers of a later day were to shed new light on the man who wrote "Silks and satins put out the kitchen fire."

There is, for example, the letter of Franklin's written to a young man enamored of a widow and wondering whether he should marry her. The young man sought Franklin's advice, and Franklin obliged with a letter both revealing and amusing. It was recently published in a volume of "The World's Great Letters." In that letter appears the long-hushed reference to the gratefulness of the middle-aged lady, and the observation that "at night all cats are grey."

THE TRYING YEARS—Franklin was as much of his time as today's youth out to make his way in the world. There was peace and there was war, there was poverty and riches, the ridiculous and the sublime.

Although he went to school for less than a year, the boy Franklin was educated by reading, and by the work of his inquiring mind and observing eye. Disliking candle-making in his father's shop, he was apprenticed to an older brother who was a printer. During this apprenticeship he read diligently, and wrote little essays that appeared in his brother's paper, the New England Courant.

But the essays were printed only under the name of his brother's office with the brother not knowing who had written them. As soon as he found out their humble origin, the essays stopped.

At the age of 17 he packed his belongings in a bundle and set out for Philadelphia, where he arrived penniless, his stomach empty but his mind filled with the high courage of youth. Franklin himself tells the pretty story of spending his last pennies for rolls, and eating one as he walked down the street. A pretty girl standing in a doorway laughed at him. The girl later became his wife.

THRIFT AND THE MAN—With one eye out for pretty girls and the other on his future, young Franklin divided his time to good advantage to himself.

His knowledge of printing secured him work. So able was he that the next year, when he was 18, Sir William Keith, governor of the colony, sent him to England to purchase a printing press which was to set him up in business in Philadelphia. Sir Keith failed to keep his promise, the money was not forthcoming for the purchase, and Franklin worked for a year in London before returning to Philadelphia. He was loaned money to start a plant, and prospered so that he bought his own paper in 1729.

It was a time of luxury and ex-

10 Years Ago—1936

Mrs. Isadore Morin has returned from Milwaukee where she visited with her daughter, Miss Catherine Morin, and with her brother, Nick Wolff and members of his family.

"Michigan's Land Zoning Law" was the subject of an interesting address given by Harold P. Lindsay, secretary of the Escanaba Chamber of Commerce, at the annual mid-winter conference of the Upper Peninsula Development Bureau at Hancock Wednesday.

Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Sederberg, Gladstone, are the parents of a son, born Wednesday at St. Francis hospital.

20 Years Ago—1926
Mrs. S. J. Spargo, aged 83, died suddenly at her home, 400 South Twelfth street, Friday morning about 10:30 o'clock.

Julius P. Schemmel, son of Mr. and Mrs. L. N. Schemmel of this city, who in the past few years has gained recognition as one of the leading mining engineers on the Mesabi range, has just been appointed chief engineer for the Pickands Mather company, in direct charge of all of that company's properties in the West and Hibbing districts of the Mesabi range.

travagance in the Old World, and high taxes for the colonies in the New World. The forces of revolution were fomenting toward open strife. Franklin's proverbs and pithy sayings were on every tongue.

"God helps them that help themselves," said the people, and "Never leave that till tomorrow which you can do today." Perhaps the people were thinking of something besides thrift when they repeated other Franklinisms: "Lying rides upon debt's back," and "Tis hard for an empty bag to stand upright."

IN PUBLIC LIFE—In Philadelphia Franklin founded the first public library in America, initiated postal service, fire companies, and a police system. Active politically, he rose to the post of postmaster general of the colonies, proposed a colonial union—favored neither by the colonies nor the mother country. He put on more riders, speeded up mail service, advertised unclaimed letters—in fact instituted practices which constitute today in the post office department. Not to be overlooked was the fact the post office department, for the first time, became self-supporting.

NO "GOOD" WARS—In an effort to avert the war which he may indirectly have helped incite, Franklin spent many years in England. "There never was a good war or a bad peace," he wrote, and then promptly came home when war started and stood shoulder to shoulder with other patriots.

He was one of the framers and signers of the Declaration of Independence. While affixing his signature to the document he said with quietly humorous philosophy: "We must all hang together, or assuredly we shall all hang separately."

Sent to France to obtain aid for the Colonies, he was successful in that and also enjoyed himself immensely in the frivolous court of a king devoted to diamonds, drink and dalliance. He played the diplomatic game and won aid for his struggling country and personal popularity for himself.

He died at the age of 84, but only after dabbling in science, bringing lightning from a cloud to prove it was electricity, and founding an academy that later became the University of Pennsylvania.

G. I.—VETERANS SERVICE
Q. I am a veteran of one year's service and have a non-service-connected disability. Is there any provision in the GI Bill for vocational training for me?

A. You may apply for education under the GI Bill according to the length of your active service and the type of discharge received. For vocational training information, we suggest that you apply to the Social Security agency or the State Department of Education for such training under a State plan.

Q. If I accept discharge from the Army of the United States in order to reenlist in the Regular Army, will I be given another physical examination?

A. Results of your physical examination upon discharge from the Army of the United States will be accepted as conclusive evidence of physical qualifications for immediate enlistment in the Regular Army.

OF GENERAL INTEREST
Q. In the old navies was a corvette larger than a frigate?

A. The corvette ranked next below the frigate, and usually had only one bank of guns.

Q. Who originated the "V for Victory" campaign?

A. It is attributed to a Belgian refugee, Victor de Laveleye. Wide publicity for the plan was given first by "Col. Britton" in broadcasts over the British Broadcasting Company's network.

Q. Has the metal of which a coin is made anything to do with its value to collectors?

A. No; neither the metal nor its age determine the numismatic value of coins. The prices for rare coins are chiefly regulated by their state of preservation, the number of pieces issued of a certain date, and the demand.

OF INTEREST TO WOMEN
Q. In contract bridge, how many honor tricks should a Two No Trump Take Out show?

A. With balanced distribution, 3 to 3½ H.T., or 2½ H. T. with at least 6 honor cards.

Q. Is it proper to wear one of the modern close-fitting housecoats in one's home when entertaining?

A. Most housecoats fall into two classes—those that are worn only in the presence of intimate household members, and those that are worn for informal social dining or entertaining at home. Among the intimate lounging styles there are the classic flannel and pale satin styles, some tailored and some with full flowing lines. Within the hostess gown bracket are the silks, satin and rayons that look more like evening dresses than housecoats. In fact, many persons buy these gowns purposely for use as evening dresses.

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

BY DREW PEARSON

Washington — It isn't being advertised, but if newly appointed Stuart Symington makes good as assistant secretary of war, he is almost certain to be upped to the No. 1 job in the war department, replacing Bob Patterson as Secretary of War.

Meanwhile, G. I.'s can expect Symington to lean over backward to give them a break. He's that kind of guy. Probably the best of President Truman's Missouri appointments, Symington started business several years ago by putting a share-the-profits plan into effect in his Emerson Electric plant in St. Louis. It worked wonders with labor.

In Washington, Symington has surprised earlier critics by his forthright handling of the extremely difficult surplus property snarl. One of the last things he did as surplus property administrator was to force the Aluminum Corporation of America to turn over its patents to the government.

On the surface, Alcoa's offer looked like a magnanimous gesture, but behind the scenes it took some tough talking by Symington and Assistant Attorney General Wendell Berge to put it across.

—ANDY MELLON'S MONOPOLY—
The Aluminum Corporation, which made the late Andrew Mellon one of the three richest men in America, had long enjoyed an airtight monopoly, was exposed by the justice department for combining with the Germans to curtail magnesium production—essential to the airplane industry. As a result, an anti-trust decision now hangs over Alcoa's head.

This was the weapon used by Symington and Berge to bludgeon Alcoa into sharing its aluminum patents.

During the war, Alcoa produced aluminum in government-owned plants, but, thanks to the vigilance of the justice department and Secretary Ickes, a policy was declared whereby Alcoa could not increase its monopoly by acquiring these plants after the war.

The problem, however, was to find another buyer to operate the government plants—especially since this buyer would not have aluminum patents. Louis Reynolds of the Reynolds Metals company was willing to take over two large plants in Arkansas, but he could not operate without using Alcoa's lime-sinter-soda patents. And Alcoa was only willing to rent these patents at prohibitive royalties.

Finally, about ten days ago, Arthur Davis, head of Alcoa, was summoned to the office of Attorney General Tom Clark. With him came I. W. Wilson, also of Alcoa, and Leon Hickman, their attorney. Sitting on the opposite side of the council table were Symington, Sam Husbands of the RFC, plus Wendell Berge, Ernest Meyers, and Irving Lipkowitz, all of the anti-trust division.

The session lasted two hours. Alcoa's Davis and Attorney Hickman did most of the talking. They proposed first that they would give their time-sinter-soda process to Alcoa's competitors, provided the government would drop its

Marianne Corcoran
Becomes the Bride
of Millard F. Birk

St. Patrick's church was the scene of the ceremony on Jan. 12 which united in marriage Miss Marianne Bernadette Corcoran, daughter of Edward B. Corcoran, of this city, and Millard Francis Birk, son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Birk, St. Petersburg, Fla.

The double ring ceremony was performed by Rev. Fr. Martin Melican, with Fr. Freiberger celebrant of the solemn high mass; Rev. Fr. Corcoran of St. John's church, Menominee, deacon; and Rev. Fr. Ruppe sub-deacon.

The bride wore a floorlength gown of white brocade satin, the fitted bodice fastened in back from the neckline to the waist with small pearl buttons. The long sleeves extended to a point at the wrists and were also fastened with small pearl buttons. Her circular fingertip veil of illusion fell from a crown of baby mums, and she carried a bouquet of red and white roses, snapdragons and baby mums. The bride's only jewelry was a gold filigree necklace, gift of the bridegroom.

Miss Therese Corcoran, the maid of honor, and Miss Rose Zita Corcoran, the bridesmaid, wore similar dresses of wool crepe. The maid of honor wore a frock of off-white and the bridesmaid's gown was ice-blue, both styled with fitted bodice, cap sleeves, with the back of the skirts gathered in a bustle effect. They carried small bouquets of baby mums and wore matching flowers in their hair.

Paul Birk was the best man, and Robert Roeder was the usher. Following the ceremony, a wedding breakfast for ten guests was served at Belle's Coffee Shop, and a reception was held in the afternoon at the home of the bride's father.

The couple left later for a wedding trip to Sudbury, Ont., Canada, the bride wearing a travelling costume of moss-green wool with black accessories.

Two New Airplanes
Arrive At Escanaba

The arrival of two more airplanes at the Escanaba airport, one for training flying students and the other for the personal use of a local business man, is indicative of the renewing interest in aviation.

The trainer is a Taylorcraft side-by-side job purchased by Wally Arntzen and Fred Sensiba of the Pioneer Aviation corporation, which is located at the Escanaba airport. The plane has a 65 h. p. motor. Arntzen and Sensiba said yesterday that war veterans desirous of taking flight training are now being screened in preparation for the opening of the training course. The school has been approved to provide flight instruction to veterans under the G. I. Bill of Rights.

The other plane to arrive in Escanaba is owned by William J. Smith, vice-president of the Delta Hardware company, and was purchased from Harry Skoblas of Manitowish. It is an all-metal, 65 h. p. Luscomb two-seater and was flown here from Manitowish by Wally Arntzen, arriving at the local airport Monday night.

Smith said that he had purchased the plans for his personal use. He is now a student flyer and expects to receive his private license this coming spring.

LEGION FETES
WAR VETERANS

Over Two Hundred Hear Service Officers At Dinner

The Legion hall was packed to the doors Monday evening at the Homecoming dinner sponsored by August Mattson Post, American Legion, to welcome home veterans of World War II.

Dinner was served to 215 persons, all veterans with the exception of a few guests. The dinner, served by the Legion Auxiliary, was excellent.

Gerald Cleary told of the work done in the Delta County Office of Veterans' Affairs which he serves as secretary. Thus far the office has aided 1,200 veterans, but paring of funds by the county board of supervisors will necessitate a direct campaign for funds in the near future with which to operate the office. The speaker also briefly reviewed the G. I. Bill of Rights.

Elmer Olson, of the U. S. Employment Office, Escanaba, invited veterans to visit the office at any time. His duties are to find employment and place men, to do job counseling, handle employers' orders and clearances.

He advised veterans applying for a civil service post to be sure they qualified for the position sought. He lauded the Veterans' Affairs office.

Ralph Olson, Escanaba, American Legion service officer, said it was his job to contact post service and welfare officers and help them solve problems they may have. He praised the work of H. J. Skogquist here and Gerald Cleary at Escanaba.

E. G. Carlson of Marquette, chief of the guidance center, told veterans what they may obtain in the way of schooling and of the tests which are made to determine vocations or type of schooling to be selected by the veteran.

George W. Beaudoin of the Marquette office of the Veterans' Administration gave information on the training on the job program for veterans and James V. Schram, Marquette, formerly of Gladstone, said that today nearly 600 veterans are receiving schooling or training on the job or training at college.

Last July there were but 16, he said, pointing to the manner in which the veterans are availing themselves of the opportunity to further their educations.

O'Neil D'Amour presided as toastmaster.

111 Cedar StreetCOUNTY BOARD
MEETS MONDAYMany Important Matters
Up For Discussion
And Disposal

The annual January meeting of the Schoolcraft county board of supervisors will meet in annual session on the morning of Monday, January 23, at 10 o'clock, according to announcement by G. Leslie Boush, county clerk.

Among matters in general up for discussion and action will be yearly reports presented by the road commission, the welfare and health departments, the agricultural agent and the soldiers and sailors relief board.

Also practically certain to come up for discussion will be the matter of transforming the county infirmary building into a hospital. The way for a move of this sort was paved at the last meeting of the county board when that body moved to dispose of all the infirmary equipment and offer the building for sale for hospital purposes.

The Manistique-Schoolcraft chamber of commerce has already launched a survey and it is expected that a committee from that body will be present at Monday's session to confer with the board concerning ways and means of making the hospital project a reality. On the Chamber of Commerce board are A. W. Heltman, Dr. James E. Omer Schuster and Russell Watson.

Saturday of this week the auditing committee will meet at the county clerk's office and go over bills to submit at Monday's meeting. The committee is composed of the following board members: Frank Conlin, Germfask; Walter Burns and Louis Tebo, Manistique.

Four members of the board, A. W. Dehlin, Cecil Johnson, W. N. Davidson and Frank Voisine, are at present in Lansing attending the annual meeting of the Michigan Supervisors' association.

City Skating Rinks
Are Back In Service

Not all residents of Manistique are complaining about the cold weather. The four skating rinks, which were put out of commission by the recent mild spell, are now back in service and in perfect condition.

Hours for skating will be as heretofore, from 3:30 to 5:30 each afternoon and from 7 to 9:30 each evening during school days and from 1:30 on during school holidays and Sundays.

Jap Oyster "Weedy"
And Poor Substitute
For East Shellfish

Washington—Warning against the dangers of a possible Japanese invasion of the Atlantic seaboard of the United States has been sounded.

No, this isn't January, 1942; it's still January, 1946. The Japs that may get into our seacoast waters if we don't watch out are the big Japanese oysters, already cultivated for commercial purposes on the Pacific coast. They're all right for those waters, for the Pacific coast didn't have any big oysters of its own, until seed oysters were imported from Japan and planted there some years before the war. New shipments of seed oysters are now expected from the same source, to replenish the beds.

However, the U. S. Fish and Wildlife Service warns Eastern Oyster "farmers" against setting Japanese oysters in their beds. While the Oriental shellfish is acceptable in lack of a better, it is not the equal of the eastern American oyster in either flavor or appearance. Moreover, it is a veritable weed among oysters, and its prolific growth might drive out the native species; or it might ruin its quality by hybridizing with it. Finally, Dr. Paul S. Galtsoff of the Service warns, the Japanese oyster drill, a predatory snail that is a deadly enemy of oysters, could easily be introduced into Eastern oyster beds, and if it does become established there the effects will be ruinous.

Museum Benefits
By Asia, Pacific
GI Souvenir Hunt

Washington—Souvenir-hunting the mark of American GIs everywhere, sometimes serves a more serious and permanent purpose than just collecting miscellaneous trophies wherewith to impress the girl-friend and the folks back home. At the annual meeting of the Smithsonian Institution's board of regents here, Dr. Alexander Wetmore, secretary of the Institution, reported on substantial and valuable additions that have been made to the scientific collections of the National Museum by members of the armed forces serving overseas, especially in Asia and the Pacific area.

Some of the small mammal specimens sent in from the Indo-Pacific region are of species hitherto unrepresented in the Museum. A collection of nearly 600 birds came from Panama, 500 from Ceylon and about 100 from the Admiralty islands. Most important of the year's insect accessions was the large amount of mosquito material received from various units of the Army and Navy.

Rotarians Honor
MHS Debaters At
Monday Meeting

Members of Manistique high school's debating team and their coach, Miss Shirley Ayner, were guests of honor of the Manistique Rotary club at its regular session Monday noon.

Their presence at the meeting was in recognition of the splendid showing made by them recently at an inter-scholastic debate tournament at Marquette a week ago Saturday, in which the four local participants won in their contests, but lost by a narrow margin to Escanaba when championship honors were being summed up. The local team was, however, awarded the championship trophy offered by the Detroit Free Press.

At the Rotary meeting, Miss Audrey Curley presented her version of the affirmative side of the whole question while George Babdelis, who also upheld the affirmative at the Marquette meet, reviewed his participation in the debate.

Miss Ann Peterson and Miss Nancy Cookson, who upheld the negative at Marquette, gave their version of the subject at Monday's meeting.

At the Marquette meeting, the affirmative team won over teams from Ishpeming and Watersmeet while the negative team won over Kingsford and Ironwood.

The debate question was based on selective service.

CIRCUIT COURT
OPENS TODAY

Session Will Be Very Brief—Few Cases On Docket

The January term of circuit court, originally scheduled to convene on Monday, January 14, and postponed to a later date, will open here today before Judge Herbert W. Runnels.

No jury cases will be heard, the jurors having been dismissed when the term was continued, and few other cases will be up for trial.

On the criminal calendar are two cases in which the defendants are charged with non-support. Lloyd W. Miller and Richard Lehman, both employed in Detroit, were bound over to circuit court on complaint of their wives.

Mrs. Miller and her two children, 7 and 2 years old, live with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Heric, and Mrs. Lehman and her four-year-old child, live here with her husband's parents. Miller was brought here by a representative of the sheriff's office, but Lehman, hearing that he was being sought by the authorities, gave himself up.

But one or two civil cases are likely to be heard.

RURAL PEOPLE TO AID DRIVE

Asked To Donate Used Clothing For War Stricken

Rural communities in Schoolcraft county are being asked to participate in the United National Clothing Collection drive. The rural schools to serve as collection depositories for the contributions.

Mrs. Ada Watson, county school commissioner, has instructed the teachers in the various schools throughout the county, to take charge of such garments as are being brought in and at stated intervals notify Manistique headquarters to come with a truck and bring the clothing to town.

Clothing donated will eventually be sent to the Manistique city fire department headquarters where firemen will sort and pack the goods.

Considerable clothing has already been turned over to the firemen, Herman Boal, the fire chief states, but the amount is very much less than that donated last year. The quality of the goods, however, is much better.

The Manistique Elks lodge is sponsoring the local drive, which is to secure serviceable used clothing for people in the war-stricken areas of Europe and Asia.

Two Unusual
Machines Are Installed Here

Acquisition of new machinery at the Hiawatha Metal Products company has been made with such regularity that many noteworthy items have become commonplace, but two machines recently installed are worthy of special mention because they are the only ones of their kind in the Upper Peninsula.

One of these machines is a No. 18 Blanchard grinder used in grinding down and surfacing blocks of steel to one-thousandth of an inch of desired dimension. It has a 30 inch table and is capable of grinding down steel blocks that are 25 inches square or 36 inches round.

The other machine is a 16 inch Monarch lathe, claimed to be the largest lathe in the Upper Peninsula. It is 92 inches between centers.

John Kluit, head of the Hiawatha Metal Products company, states that he was practically forced to install these two machines in order to manufacture necessary parts with a minimum of delay. The nearest that machines of these types are otherwise available are at the large industrial centers of Detroit, Flint and Milwaukee. Having these machines on the spot will save much delay.

Non-Support Cases
Disposed Of Here
In Justice Court

Settlement of two non-support cases pending for the past two weeks, was brought about at hearings held before W. G. Stephens in justice court the first of the week.

The case of LeRoy Vertz, of Manistique, charged by his wife with failure to provide her and her children with funds sufficient to keep them properly fed and clothed, was dismissed after Mrs. Vertz drawn. Court costs of $5 were assessed against Vertz.

Arthur Demars, of Cooks, facing similar charges, waived the right to be tried by a jury and the case was tried before Judge Stephens. Principal witness against Demars was Mrs. Anton Weber, poor commissioner, who testified as to conditions in the home, having previously been ordered to make an investigation.

Demars was found guilty and ordered by the court to contribute $50 per month as well as fuel for the support of his family. To insure his compliance with the order, he was placed under $500 bonds.

Kenneth White, the club's president.

Spur Activity In Fund Drive

Letters are being sent out from local headquarters appealing for a more favorable response to the current drive for funds to support the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis, Inc.

Charles D. Manson, chairman of the drive in Schoolcraft county states that while the response to the March of Dimes appeal has been generous, there seems to be a general lack of interest in this great cause which a few years ago was our Number One benevolence.

Mr. Manson stresses the fact that 1945 was one of the record years in infantile paralysis fatalities, and that while the care and treatment of those who are stricken with the disease is an important matter for consideration in the use to which the funds collected are put; it is equally important to remember that a good share of the money spent is for research work having for its objective study of the disease and its prevention.

During the eight years of its existence the National Foundation has disbursed over eight million dollars for research and education and over two million dollars for emergency aid in epidemics.

Locally more than seventy coin collecting boxes have been distributed in Manistique and throughout the county. Assisting in collection activities throughout the county are the following community chairmen: John G. Rein, Gulliver; Mrs. Catherine Shay, Germfask; Earl Sadler, Seney; Mrs. J. J. Griffin, Cooks; and Mrs. John Olson, Thompson.

Pays $50 Fine For Drunken Driving

Theodore Jackson, 33, of Gulliver, was fined $50 and costs following his plea of guilty Saturday in justice court before Judge W. G. Stephens, on a charge of drunken driving.

He had been arrested by a member of the state police force the day before and was taken to the county jail where he remained until called for trial.

In addition to paying the fine, his driver's license was revoked.

Riding To Hounds? Must Have Permit

Lansing—There's always something to take the joy out of life.
Participate in fox hunts must have run permits.

The law says so, and conservation officers have the job of seeing to it that the law is observed.
However, the department is trying to make it as easy as possible for hunters to secure the permits.

Officers are getting to as many organized hunts as possible, carrying application forms with them.
The forms may be secured also at the department's various headquarters or from the Lansing offices.

Gun permits are issued without cost to holders of small game hunting licenses and must be shown by all persons who carry sporting arms into the field during closed seasons.

HERBERT BECK TO SPEAK HERE

Will Deliver Christian Science Lecture
Next Sunday

Herbert W. Beck, C. S. B. of San Francisco will deliver a Christian Science lecture at the Masonic Temple, Escanaba, on Sunday afternoon, Jan. 27, beginning at 3:15 o'clock. The public is cordially invited. There will be no admission fee.

The subject of his lecture will be "Christian Science: The Revelation of the Omnipotence of Good."

Mr. Beck is a member of the board of lectureship of The Mother Church, The First Church of Christ, Scientist, in Boston. He was born in San Francisco, and received his education in the public schools of Oakland and the University of California.

His early business training was with the Pacific Coast Borax company where he rose to the position of director. He left this company and went into the practice of Christian Science. He served as reader, president and director in branch churches of Christian Science and was a chaplain in the U. S. army during the first World War. Later, he became assistant to the manager of committees on publication of The Mother Church. He became a teacher of Christian Science and returned to the San Francisco bay area to teach and practice.

In 1938, Mr. Beck was appointed to the committee on publication for Northern California, which position he retained until he was called to Boston in 1940 to become manager of committees on publication. In July 1941, he was elected to serve on The Christian Science Board of Lectureship.

MUST RE-DESIGN RADAR FOR PEACE

Wartime Radar Too Closely
And Complicated For Ordinary Use

New York—Marine radar for peacetime use, to help avoid collisions and to save lives, property and time, must be properly designed for the job. The radar set on a vessel must be reliable, not too costly, have low minimum range, and be capable of operation by the regular complement of officers of the ship.

Military radar systems, developed for such varied purposes as surface search, aircraft detection, height finding, gunfire control, range finding and other wartime uses, were designed for these special purposes. The very design elements that produced excellent military radar are often those which make for an unsuitable peacetime radar, according to radar experts.

This is the opinion of L. H. Lynn and O. H. Winn, both of the General Electric Company, expressed today at the meeting here of the American Institute of Electrical Engineers. They discussed the design requirements for peacetime radar, particularly as applied to surface ships.

"Maximum ranges of military equipment frequently exceed a hundred miles and require appropriate high power for such a range," they said. "A passenger ship is much more concerned with an obstacle which may be only several miles away, hence a large equipment is neither justifiable nor desirable."

"Minimum ranges of a destroyer's radar may well be a mile or two, on the theory that an enemy must be discovered long before he can approach that close," it was explained. "Minimum range of a radar for a cargo ship is required to be less than a ship-length, the shorter the better, in order that navigation may be safely accomplished in congested harbors."

Early in 1943, a modification of the military ship-borne search radar was installed as an experiment on an ore boat on the Great Lakes. It proved to be a highly useful navigational tool, the G-E engineers stated, but was too complex for non-technical personnel to use. As a result a relatively simple radar system was developed which is now called an "Electronic Navigator."

This has three units, antenna system, console and motor-alternator. The console, they explained, contains the transmitter, receiver, cathode ray tube, sweep circuits, pulsing circuits, rotating field mechanism, appropriate power supplies and controls.

"The pulse," they continued, "is considerably less than one microsecond in length and repeats at approximately 1000 cycles per second. Thus the peak power delivered to the magnetron is of the order of kilowatts, though the average power is but a few watts."

Louis Buchman Promoted By Utah Copper Company

Louis Buchman, a graduate of the Michigan College of Mining and Technology and a former Rapid River resident, has been promoted to general superintendent of the Utah Copper company at Bingham, Utah.

Mr. Buchman, who has been general superintendent of mines, will maintain his headquarters at the company's office at Bingham Canyon. He spent seven years at various mining and milling operations in Utah, Nevada, Arizona and Oregon before he joined the Utah Copper company as assistant assayer in 1914. Later, he was made assayer, and in 1922 was promoted to safety engineer at the Bingham mine, becoming assistant superintendent a year later, was promoted to superintendent in 1930, and made general superintendent of mines in 1938.

Mr. Buchman is a brother of Harry, Anna and Sarah Buchman of Rapid River.

LOUIS BUCHMAN

COUNTY JAIL IS RESTRICTED

Federal Inspector Gives
42 Percent Rating
In 1945

Washington, D. C. (WNS)—The Delta County jail is ranked as "restricted" for housing of Federal prisoners, it was learned today. This means that Federal prisoners are not housed there unless other jail facilities are not readily available.

Of 3000 county jails inspected by bureau officials, only 500 have met Federal standards. The remainder, according to Justice Department officials, are not fit to house any prisoners, and should be placed under better management and cleaned up.

The rating of the Delta County jail is 42 percent. This rating is based on an inspection made August 4, 1945. It is possible that improvements have been made since that time.

In many of the jails not approved by the Federal Government, children are often mixed with drunks, hardened criminals, and sex perverts. Most of these jails have "kangaroo courts", impromptu courts set up by prisoners allegedly to maintain order in the jail, but often for the benefit of the "judges", usually the biggest bullies in the prison and sometimes murderers or degenerates.

The Bureau of Prisons will not approve any jail where a kangaroo court operates.

"I am appalled that some jail officials are so criminally lax that they turn their own jobs over to prisoners," said Miss Nina Kinsella, for 15 years supervisor of jail inspection.
